Racial injustice: The Ghost of Hate

Hate has its roots deep in the heart of the relations between the weak and the strong, between the controllers of society and those who are controlled by it. We will explore hidden fears that spawn racial bigotry and bold solutions.

Deacon, author, radio and former television host, Viet Nam era veteran and veteran civil rights worker. Deacon Miller is the retired owner and president of A. Miller investments. Miller was ordained for the Archdiocese of Hartford in 2004. He recently retired as the director of of the Office for Black Catholic Ministries. Besides his assigned parish, he is the Chaplin at the Hartford's Capital Community College and Adjunct faculty for Holy Family Retreat Center. Deacon Miller is a certified trainer in Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s nonviolence philosophy as well as a Certified Spiritual Director and is a board member for the Connecticut Center for Nonviolence. To this day he continues to address 21st-century examples of the societal tendency to embrace violence. Echoing the thoughts of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., he believes that as part of the great human experience, no one can sit idly tolerant to the great injustices that happen anywhere in the world.
